

FALL FORUM

Inclusive and Meaningful Assessment

Friday, November 2, 2018, 8:30 am to 3:00 pm
at the College of the Holy Cross, Worcester, Massachusetts

Keynote: The person, the group, and the campus climate: Three intersectionalities for three levels of inclusive assessment.

Learning assessment is ideal if it measures student growth, learning and the campus climate. Dr. Knelfelkamp will discuss how all of us can take ownership of learning assessment and seek the many meaningful stories available in learning assessment data.

Dr. Lee Knelfelkamp, Professor Emerita at Teachers College, Columbia University, has researched and written about student intellectual, ethical, identity and intercultural development. She has spent her career advocating for deeper understanding of the diversity of our students and the obligations of campuses to make the appropriate cultural and organizational changes to meet their needs. Her recent work in the area of assessment is to have designed the Personal and Social Responsibility Instrument (PSRI), which is used to assess campus climate around such issues as taking seriously the perspectives of others, developing an ethical stance, and becoming an active and involved citizen. Her most recent publication is "The Whole Student: Finding Balance at the Intersections of Identity and Belonging."
